About COG

For more than 50 years, the Metropolitan Washington Council of Governments, known as COG, has helped develop regional solutions to such issues as the environment, affordable housing, growth and development, public health, child welfare, public safety, homeland security, and transportation. COG is an independent, nonprofit association comprised of elected officials from 21 local governments, members of the Maryland and Virginia state legislatures, and members of the U.S. Congress.

Policies are set through the COG Board of Directors, the National Capital Region Transportation Planning Board, and the Metropolitan Washington Air Quality Committee. These three boards are responsible for a broad range of issues under the COG umbrella. Supporting committees help shape programs through the dedicated work of a wide array of public servants, from police chiefs to social workers.

COG Board of Directors

The Board of Directors is COG's governing body and is responsible for its overall policies, functions, and funds. Board members are appointed each year by the participating local governments and by caucuses of state legislative delegations from the region. The COG Board takes action on committee recommendations, discusses current and emerging regional problems, and receives briefings on issues facing the region. Board meetings are open to the public, and representatives from the media frequently attend. The COG Board meets monthly.

Vision

Mission

COG is the premier forum to resolve regional issues by convening local governments and other stakeholders. It is the place where intergovernmental plans are developed to enhance the quality of life in the National Capital Region.

The elected officials of COG envision the National Capital Region as the best place to live, work, play and learn. COG fosters regionalism by promoting regional partnerships, developing best practices, applying cutting-edge technologies, and providing a forum for decision-making.

Message from the Board Chair and Executive Director

Penelope A. Gross
2009 COG Board of Directors Chair

Balancing the region's short-term needs with its long-term goals.

It's the principal challenge for COG and its member governments during the current economic crisis. Area governments are being squeezed. Depressed housing and commercial property values and shrinking revenues are making it more difficult to provide critical services to area residents. At the same time, area leaders must consider how today's decisions will affect long-term goals related to growth and development, climate change and energy use.

COG is of greatest value to the region during times like these. Just last year, we brought together elected officials and key stakeholders on a number of urgent topics like foreclosures, pedestrian safety, and the impact of the fiscal crisis on area nonprofits and foundations. The Commuter Connections program seized the opportunity to promote its new, online ridematching system just as it garnered unprecedented interest due to a summer of record-high gasoline prices. And with an eye to the future, COG moved full steam ahead by unveiling its regional climate change report and recommendations and launching its Greater Washington 2050 initiative.

In order to better assist its member governments, COG has begun to streamline its operations to create a leaner, more focused and financially stable organization. While cutting expenses, COG is also striving to become a greener, more sustainable regional leader. This publication is an example of this commitment. To reduce printing costs and save some trees, COG is combining its useful regional directory with its annual report of accomplishments.

We hope that as you look through this document, you will notice the many ways COG is helping the region respond to immediate needs and ensuring that metropolitan Washington is the best place to live, work, play and learn for future generations.

Transportation Planning Board (TPB)

The National Capital Region Transportation Planning Board (TPB) is the federally designated Metropolitan Planning Organization (MPO) for the region, and plays an important role as the regional forum for transportation planning. The TPB is responsible for developing regional transportation policy and a long-range transportation plan for the metropolitan Washington region, as well as programs that the federal government must approve in order for federal-aid transportation funds to flow to the area. The TPB was created in 1965 by an agreement among local governments and the state departments of transportation in response to the requirements of the Federal Aid Highway Act of 1962. In July 1966, by mutual agreement, the TPB became associated with COG. The TPB meets monthly.

Responding to Foreclosures

The tidal wave of foreclosures

has had a major impact on communities by displacing families, leaving neighborhoods vulnerable to vandalism, and complicating local governments' budgets due to lost revenue in property taxes. Like many metropolitan areas across the country, the National Capital Region is being hit hard by the foreclosure crisis. In fact, it has one of the fastest growing foreclosure rates in the nation according to a report prepared for COG by the Center for Regional Analysis at George Mason University. Foreclosures in the Washington DC Region showed area families losing homes six times more frequently during the first quarter of 2008 than in 2007.

Metropolitan Washington Air Quality Committee (MWAQC)

The Metropolitan Washington Air Quality Committee (MWAQC) is the entity certified by the mayor of the District of Columbia and the governors of Maryland and Virginia to prepare an air quality plan for the Washington Metropolitan Area under the Federal Clean Air Act Amendments of 1990. In executing its responsibilities, MWAQC coordinates air quality planning activities among COG and other external committees and the Transportation Planning Board, reviews policies, resolves policy differences, and adopts a regional air quality plan for transmittal to the District of Columbia and the states of Maryland and Virginia. MWAQC meets monthly.

Foreclosures, CONTINUED

During a one-year period ending in February 2008, 15,613 homes went into foreclosure. The report also illustrated the scope of the foreclosure problem in the area.

While Prince William County in Virginia and Prince George's County in Maryland have experienced the highest number of foreclosures, neighborhoods in Germantown, Maryland, Herndon, Virginia and Centreville, Virginia also had dramatic increases.

While the report predicted the region will rebound from the current crisis due to its strong economy, area leaders recognized the need for immediate action to help homeowners currently facing the threat of foreclosure. At the Regional Housing Foreclosure Summit in June, over 200 public officials, housing industry representatives, and nonprofit leaders gathered to hear results from the report and discuss ways to work together to strengthen the region's safety net for affected families.

One of the key outcomes of the event was the creation of a fund administered by COG to help local nonprofits responding to the foreclosure crisis. Freddie Mac, which co-sponsored the summit with COG, provided an initial contribution and COG awarded grants to six area organizations in September. Moving forward, COG will continue to monitor trends and pursue opportunities to partner with the public, private and nonprofit sectors to help families affected by foreclosure.

Launching Greater Washington 2050

In February, COG launched Greater Washington 2050, an initiative to improve the quality of life for area residents in the next half century by promoting regional awareness, leadership, and action. It is a coalition of public, business, civic and environmental stakeholders in the region, led by Sharon Bulova, Chair, Fairfax County Board of Supervisors.

In November, Greater Washington 2050 hosted 90 regional leaders from local and federal government, as well as the private and nonprofit sectors for a Scenario Thinking Workshop. Sponsored by COG, the National Capital Planning Commission, and the D.C. Office of Planning, the purpose of the workshop was to raise awareness about key risks and opportunities our region faces, identify strategies likely to produce good results no matter how the future unfolds, and explore the extent to which participants' hopes for the future are aligned around a shared strategic direction.

COG Policy Committees

Aviation Policy Committee (APC)

Serves as an official advisor to the Metropolitan Washington Airports Authority on programs and activities relating to airport and aircraft policies. APC meets bimonthly.

Chesapeake Bay Policy Committee (CBPC)

Established by the COG Board of Directors in recognition of the importance of the Chesapeake Bay Program to local governments within the region. The Committee focuses on developing proactive Bay policies on behalf of the COG membership, as well as communicating with COG member jurisdictions on Bay Program activities. CBPC meets bimonthly.

Human Services and Public Safety Policy Committee (HSPSPC)

Addresses a broad range of regional issues, including law enforcement, fire and rescue services, affordable housing, health and human services, foster care, substance abuse, and mental health. HSPSPC meets bimonthly.

Metropolitan Development Policy Committee (MDPC)

Advises the Board of Directors on all planning, land use, forecasting, and economic development issues. The committee is responsible for integrating land use, transportation, and environmental policies, and also reviews and recommends changes in metropolitan development policies and plans. MDPC meets bimonthly.

Please visit www.mwcog.org for the latest information on meeting dates and times.

COG Public/Private Partnerships

Clean Air Partners

A volunteer, nonprofit, public-private partnership chartered by COG and the Baltimore Metropolitan Council. The Partnership seeks to improve health and the quality of life in the Washington and Baltimore metropolitan regions by educating the public to take voluntary action to reduce ground-level ozone and particle pollution, and to reduce exposure to ozone. COG and the BMC actively support the Partners' efforts, with COG providing administrative and financial support.

Metropolitan Washington Alternative Fuels Clean Cities Partnership

A public-private partnership organized and coordinated by COG. Membership includes local government and private fleet managers; area utilities and other alternative fuel interests; nonprofit environmental and advocacy organizations; federal and state governments; and academia. The primary goal of the Partnership is to encourage and accelerate the use of alternative fueled vehicles in the region as a means of promoting energy security and improving environmental quality.

National Capital Regional Emergency Preparedness Council (EPC)

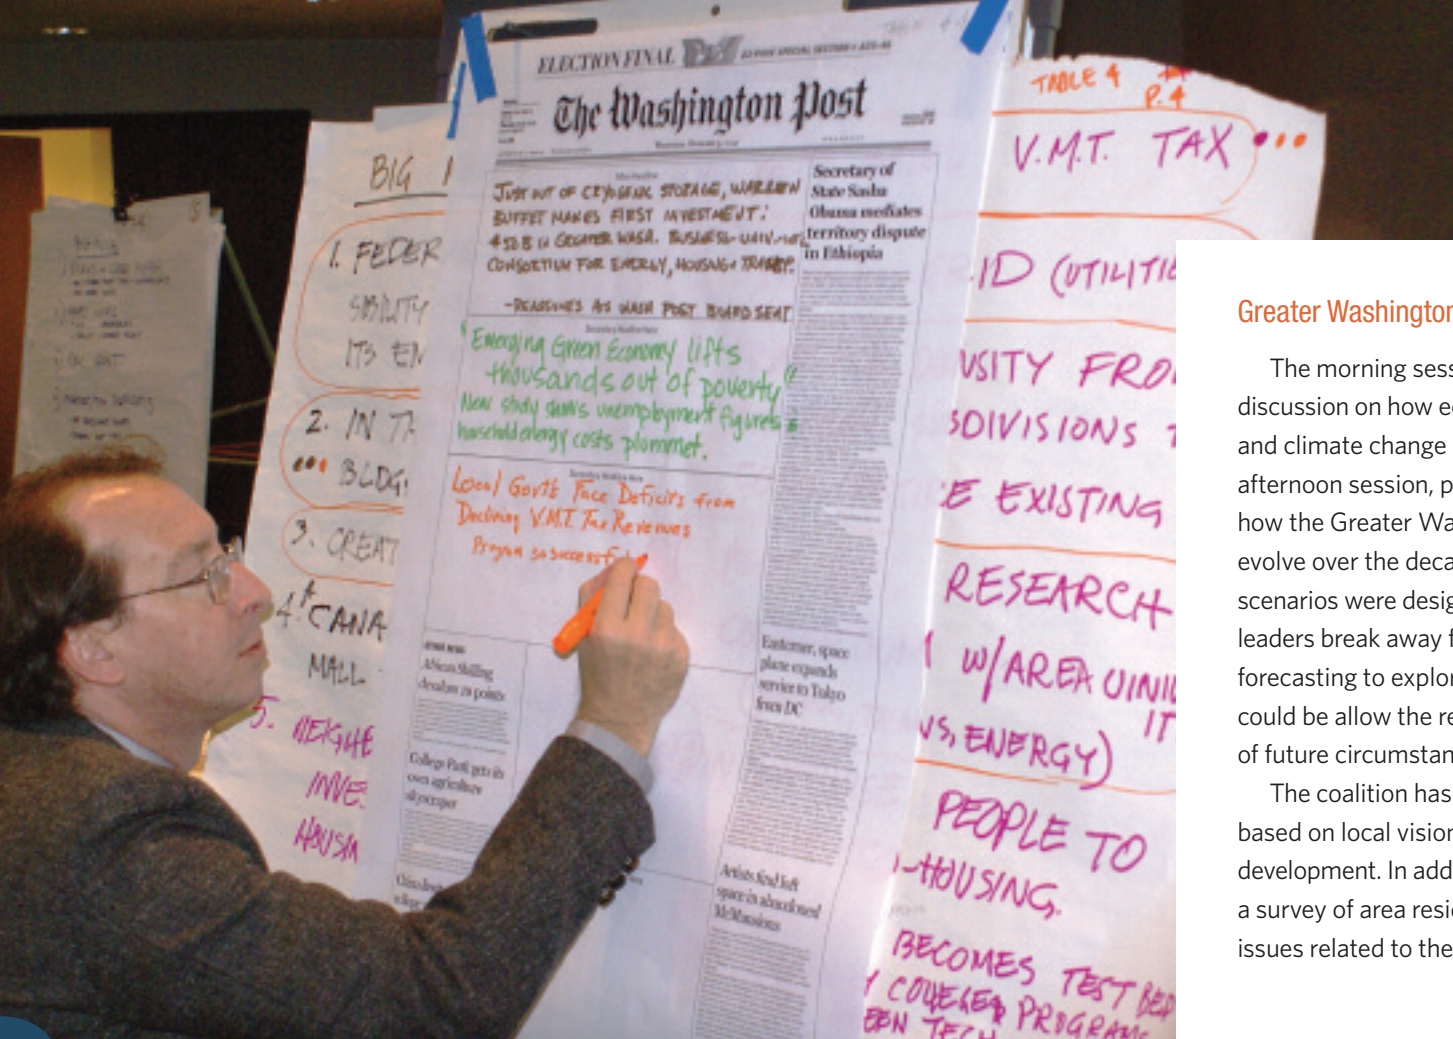

A public-private advisory body established by the COG Board of Directors of local elected officials and senior representatives of key federal, state, nonprofit, and private sector stakeholders. The EPC oversees and implement the Regional Emergency Coordination Plan; coordinates activities of the various Regional Emergency Support Function working groups as they develop specific procedures and relationships; and develops training or tests of various components of regional emergency preparedness in conjunction with the Chief Administrative Officers (CAO) Committee and state/federal Senior Policy Group.

Washington Area Housing Partnership (WAHP)

A regional public-private housing partnership that acts as a catalyst to preserve and expand the supply of affordable housing for low- and moderate-income families in the region. WAHP convenes regional leaders and stakeholders, researches and reports on local housing policies, provides technical assistance to nonprofit organizations and local governments, and advocates for expanding affordable housing opportunities across the region. Although the Partnership has its own by-laws and board of directors, it is housed within and enjoys the full support COG.

The morning session of the workshop featured an expert panel discussion on how economic developments, technological innovations, and climate change might affect the future of the region. During the afternoon session, participants discussed four different scenarios of how the Greater Washington area could evolve over the decades ahead. The scenarios were designed to help regional leaders break away from conventional forecasting to explore alternative futures and the kind of policies that could be allow the region to respond successfully across a wide range of future circumstances.

The coalition has also focused on developing planning principles based on local vision plans and a regional compact to guide future development. In addition, Greater Washington 2050 will be conducting a survey of area residents in early 2009 to gauge public opinion on issues related to the region's long-term growth and development.

Improving Pedestrian Safety

Over 200 area officials, transportation planners, law enforcement officers and community activists gathered at the National Press Club to discuss ways to improve pedestrian safety at a regional workshop sponsored by COG, the Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority (WMATA), AAA, the District Department of Transportation (DDOT), Maryland Department of Transportation (MDOT), and Virginia Department of Transportation (VDOT). Pedestrians account for 20 percent of individuals killed on the roads in the Washington region, and as the population continues to grow, there will be more pedestrians and heavier traffic congestion.

Pedestrian Safety, CONTINUED

Attendees worked together in a series of sessions and made several recommendations including continued, aggressive public outreach messages such as the Street Smart campaign. Street Smart uses creative radio advertising in English and Spanish to reach drivers, and targets pedestrians through outdoor and transit advertising. Street Smart began as a once-a-year effort and has expanded with both spring and fall campaigns. The program is coordinated by the Transportation Planning Board, and is supported by federal funds made available through state governments, and funding from some area jurisdictions. Attendees also recommended better placement of bus stops throughout the region. On the topic of enforcement, participants called for consistent traffic laws across jurisdictional lines, traffic units dedicated to enforcing pedestrian safety laws, and more community policing.

Supporting Homeland Security

In order to help the nation's metropolitan areas (which now account for over 80 percent of the U.S. population) prepare for potential attacks, the federal government instituted the Urban Areas Security Initiative (UASI) program. Purchasing radiation detectors that will help police and fire personnel detect a "dirty" or nuclear bomb and increasing the ability of area hospitals to treat large numbers of individuals following such an attack are two key areas in which the National Capital Region will allocate the $59.8 million it received in 2008 UASI funding from the U.S. Department of Homeland Security.

Homeland Security, CONTINUED

In addition to providing support to the UASI funding process, the National Capital Region Emergency Preparedness Council (EPC) held its annual Senior Leaders Seminar in October. The goal of the seminar was to ensure that all jurisdictions in the National Capital Region are prepared to effectively respond to and recover from a pandemic influenza. The event also sought to identify strategies for the public and private sectors to cope with a catastrophic public health emergency, as well as communicating messages to the public.

In anticipation of the unprecedented demand that the inauguration of President Barack Obama would place on the region's infrastructure and emergency response agencies, COG staff provided wide-ranging support of numerous public safety committees addressing matters related to the event. The COG Executive Director also initiated regular discussions on inauguration planning with the District of Columbia City Administrator to speak about questions and concerns of area Chief Administrative Officers (CAOs). COG staff is partnering with D.C.'s Homeland Security and Emergency Management Agency (HSEMA) to complete an after action report on the event.

Responding to Climate # Change

At its November meeting, the COG Board of Directors adopted the stringent goals for reducing the region's greenhouse gas emissions presented in the National Capital Region Climate Change Report. COG's decision, one of the few in the country to affect a multi-state region, proposes to return to 2005 levels of regional greenhouse gas emissions by 2012. The mid-range goal is for a reduction of 20 percent below the 2005 levels by 2020, and the long-term goal is for a reduction of 80 percent below the 2005 levels by 2050. The report is the culmination of an intense, year-and-a-half long effort by COG's Climate Change Steering Committee, which was comprised of officials from the District of Columbia, Maryland and Virginia. COG staff took the extra step to make sure that each member government was briefed on the report's findings and recommendations by presenting the report at city and county council meetings and special outreach events.

Climate Change, CONTINUED

"Most of the recommendations in this climate change report are common sense things that your mom used to tell you to do," said Montgomery County Councilmember Nancy Floreen, who serves as Chair of the COG Climate Change Steering Committee. "In the fight against climate change, we want to remind citizens that small actions like turning off the lights, lowering the thermostat, walking more, and riding the bus can add up to a big impact and can help them save money at the same time."

JOHN DAEMON

While a growing number of individual cities and counties are moving forward to address climate change, this is one of the first programs to involve localities over an entire metropolitan area. The region's elected officials view this approach as one that will provide a catalyst for improving the environment and provide for a prosperous and sustainable future. Rep. Gerald Connolly (VA-11th) indicated the immediate need to act on the issue. "I believe the debate over the science of global warming needs to end and addressing the reality of global warming should begin," he said.

The metropolitan Washington region is growing. COG forecasts an addition of 1.6 million new residents and 1.2 million new jobs to the region by 2030. Based on current business-as-usual projections of growth in population, housing, employment, and energy use, total greenhouse gas emissions in the region will increase by 33 percent by 2030 and 43 percent by 2050.

Restoring the Anacostia Watershed

The Anacostia watershed encompasses 176 square miles within suburban Maryland and the District of Columbia and is one of the most densely populated watersheds within the Chesapeake Bay basin. Restoration efforts since 1987 are beginning to improve conditions in the watershed, which has suffered from centuries of abuse. In 2006, the COG Board of Directors created the Anacostia Watershed Restoration Partnership to enhance restoration efforts.

GOVERNOR'S PRESS OFFICE

In September, Maryland Governor Martin O'Malley, who serves on the Anacostia Watershed Restoration Partnership Leadership Council, participated in a boat tour of the river and released an Action Agenda of over 30 actions that will take place over the next three years to clean up the polluted watershed. The Action Agenda highlighted the progress made to date such as decreased pollution levels, 10 new miles of restored streams, and 27 new acres of tidal wetlands. It also noted that goals on trash reduction, aquatic health and reforestation have not yet been achieved. In November, the Partnership released the first phase of the comprehensive "Anacostia Watershed Restoration Plan," being prepared by U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. Through this plan, which owes a debt of gratitude to the region's Congressional delegation, the Partnership is working to identify long-term restoration actions.

Improving Air Quality

While the region's progress in reducing ground-level ozone pollution has drawn praise in recent years, area leaders are also calling attention to the great strides being made in relation to fine particle pollution. This form of pollution is a mixture of microscopic solids and liquid droplets suspended in the air, which can get deep into peoples' lungs and bloodstreams. Local governments are helping improve air quality through wind purchases and green buildings, improving energy efficiency, and increasing tree canopy in the region. In addition, through the adoption of the Clean Air Interstate Rule (the "Healthy Air Act" in Maryland), states in the region are working to reduce pollution from power plants. The state rules will reduce sulfur dioxide, a major component of fine particles, from power plants by 80% starting in 2010.

Air Quality, CONTINUED

In October, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency proposed to reclassify the region as an area that meets its fine particle standards because its air quality monitors have shown improvements since 2005. The action was greeted with enthusiasm by area officials who serve on the Metropolitan Washington Air Quality Committee, the body charged with preparing air quality plans for the region. Falls Church Council Member David Snyder, who served as MWAQC Chair, called the action “a powerful validation of the hard work of all elements of the region—government, businesses and individuals.” MWAQC’s most recent plan, released earlier in the year, aimed to make even deeper fine particle pollution reductions than those required by the Clean Air Act. For the region to be in compliance of federal standards, however, EPA must make the reclassification official.

Securing

Metro Dedicated Funding

COG applauded the passage of legislation securing a dedicated funding source for the Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority (WMATA). Obtaining dedicated funding for WMATA has been a top priority of COG for many years. COG first called attention to Metro's funding shortfalls in 2005 when it worked with the Greater Washington Board of Trade and Federal City Council to sponsor a blue ribbon panel of transportation funding experts to examine the issue.

Former Rep. Tom Davis, (R-VA) introduced the funding legislation in the House of Representatives and together with Sen. Ben Cardin (D-MD), worked tirelessly to keep the issue at the forefront of the Congressional agenda. The funding measure was signed by former President George W. Bush in October and authorizes $1.5 billion over 10 years in matching funding for capital improvements needed by WMATA. This action is crucial during a time when transit systems across the country are experiencing a surge in demand and Metrorail expects to have a record-breaking year in terms of ridership. The District of Columbia, Maryland, and Virginia have dedicated funds to qualify for a federal match, and in October, the U.S. Senate passed a measure which provided the last piece of a puzzle that has been many years in the making.

At its Annual Membership and Awards Luncheon in December, COG presented the 2008 Elizabeth and David Scull Metropolitan Public Service Award to Davis and Cardin for their leadership in helping the region secure a dedicated funding source for WMATA. This award is presented to outstanding elected officials who have shown great determination and perseverance in improving the metropolitan Washington region.

Improving Transportation Access

In 2008, a number of important developments took place for improving transportation access in the region. In June, the TPB approved twelve projects, including wheelchair accessible taxicabs, which will improve the access and mobility of persons with disabilities and low-income commuters in the region. As the designated recipient of federal funding under the Job Access Reverse Commute (JARC) and New Freedom programs of the Federal Transit Administration (FTA), the TPB received approximately $1 million per program per year for four years to improve transportation access in the metropolitan Washington region.

Transportation Access, CONTINUED

While most of the District's neighboring jurisdictions have accessible taxi service, wheelchair accessible cabs will be available in the District of Columbia for the first time following this action by the TPB. Funding was also provided to support coordinated driver training and marketing. This funding will help raise the number of accessible taxicabs in the District from zero to 21. "As result of these endorsed projects, D.C. will no longer be one of the few major U.S. cities without accessible taxi service," said Alexandria City Councilmember

Tim Lovain, who chaired the TPB Human Service Transportation Coordination Task Force, which developed priorities for the project selection process.

In November, an independent review was released on MetroAccess, the door to door service provided by the Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority (WMATA) for transit users unable to take the bus or Metrorail system due to a disability. The review, which was prepared for the TPB, found that while progress has been made in improving the service, a number of challenges remain.

Promoting Better Commutes

For over a decade, Commuter Connections

has encouraged area residents to use alternatives to driving to work alone. In summer 2008, during the well-publicized rise in gas prices, it experienced an unprecedented number of inquiries for its ridesharing service in 2008. In June alone, the program received a 184 percent increase in applications compared to the same time last year.

In an effort to make the decision to adopt ridesharing easier, Commuter Connections unveiled its free, real-time ridesharing system to the public in September. The new, state-of-the-art system provides area commuters with a list of individuals who live and work near them, have similar work schedules, and are interested in carpooling or vanpooling to and from work. The system also provides other important information such as the closest park and ride lots, transit stations and telework centers to each resident's home. A higher level of interactivity is one of the system's core concepts and the new system puts complete control in the hands of commuters.

Better Commutes, CONTINUED

Speaking at the press conference for the system's launch, Charles Jenkins, Frederick County Commissioner and TPB Chairman called the new system a collaborative effort among the transportation network's regional members. "This new software represents a three-year effort by Commuter Connections' network members to make it easier than ever for area commuters to find nearby carpoolers," Jenkins said.

On September 22, Commuter Connections helped organize the first region-wide Car Free Day in the Washington metropolitan area, an annual international event which seeks to raise awareness of auto-alternative means of transportation.

Updating Transportation

Plans

The TPB added a number of regionally significant projects to the 2008 Constrained Long-Range

Transportation Plan (CLRP). The first new project focuses on improving access to Fort Belvoir from both I-95 and the Fairfax County Parkway, in anticipation of increased demand at the facility due to the Base Realignment and Closures (BRAC) act. This project uses federal funding and is slated to be complete by 2013.

The second new project is the creation and operation of a streetcar system running approximately 4.7 miles between Pentagon City in Arlington County and Skyline in Fairfax County. For most of the route, streetcars will travel in mixed traffic. This project utilizes state and local funding and is scheduled to be complete by 2016.

The third new project is the implementation of the Fairfax Connector Service Transit Development Plan. This plan includes increasing bus service on priority routes, purchasing 35 new Fairfax Connector buses, expanding the West Ox Bus Operations Facility to accommodate new buses and increased service, and improving bus stop access and safety. This project uses local funding and has a completion target of 2011.

Advocating Changes in Transportation Funding

In September, the TPB voted to adopt a set of policy principles calling for a substantial increase in federal transportation funding and major changes in how those funds are administered. The principles outline what the TPB believes should be included in the next federal transportation funding package which Congress is beginning to develop. The current federal surface transportation act was authorized in 2005 and expires on September 30, 2009.

Current legislation allocates funding for highways based on different formulas and procedures than it uses for transit. While vehicle miles traveled continue to decline, transit agencies across the country have seen their ridership records shattered. The principles approved by the TPB state that fundamental changes are needed in the current structure and funding of federal surface transportation programs to change cumbersome and inefficient program structures and inadequate funding levels that have resulted in serious under-investment in transportation.

The principles call for a more comprehensive examination of transportation investments, regardless of mode, which includes analysis of economic, social, and environmental costs and benefits. An increased federal focus on the issue of congestion in metropolitan areas, such as the National Capital Region, was also a key point of the approved principles. The principles also address the manner in which substantial increases in federal funding should be obtained. A combination of increased fuel taxes and user fees, variable pricing strategies, and national infrastructure banks were identified as prospective sources.

Improving Regional Collaboration

As home of the nation's capital and as a tri-state region, COG and its local governments must work proactively with state and federal partners. COG has increased its outreach efforts by holding events with state lawmakers, and has planned regular outreach for 2009 in the District, Annapolis and Richmond and with the region's Congressional delegation. COG will also look for opportunities to advance high profile initiatives, such as its regional climate change report and recommendations, by working with the new Obama administration.

Collaboration, CONTINUED

COG hosted a workshop in October with the National Governor's Association and the National Association of Regional Councils to provide participants from over a dozen states with a sound understanding of the work of Metropolitan Planning Organizations and Regional Councils. COG members, staff and area officials explained how regional organizations can complement state initiatives in transportation, economic development, emergency preparedness and environmental planning.

US - European Conference of

In addition to improving collaboration with its state and federal partners, the Northern Virginia Regional Commission and COG helped organize the first-ever U.S.-European Conference of Metropolitan Regional Councils in April. The two-day event, held in Alexandria, Virginia, brought together more than 170 senior policy officials and staff representing over 40 U.S. and European regions to sign a declaration of cooperation on climate change. At its annual meeting, COG awarded NVRC with its Regional Partnership Award for its leadership on the cross-Atlantic effort.

Greening COG

As a regional leader devoted to the goal of reducing greenhouse gas emissions and promoting sustainable development, COG understands the importance of leading by example. With the help of its knowledgeable and creative staff, COG has collaborated with its building co-owners, ICMA and ICMA-RC, and management to improve its water and energy efficiency and to promote green consciousness through an enhanced recycling program, lighting controls, building engineering, and commuting policies that promote telework, transit, bicycling and walking to work. In addition, the first phase of COG's green roof was completed in 2008.

Greening COG, CONTINUED

In February, COG, as a corporate entity, joined the Cool Capital Challenge, an initiative which unites individuals, schools, congregations, businesses, governments, and other institutions in the attempt “to take a two-billion-pound bite out of the capital region’s carbon dioxide emissions by 2009.” COG also encouraged its members to join the challenge which provides individuals and jurisdictions with specific steps they can take to reduce greenhouse gas emissions. Additionally, the COG Board expressed support for resolutions in the Maryland and Virginia general assemblies, including a Maryland bill to establish a 15% reduction in electricity consumption, and a Virginia bill to establish a Commission on Energy and Climate change. The Board also approved resolutions in Maryland and Virginia to establish Green Building standards.

Launching Podcasts

In October, COG launched its podcast series, "The COG Podcast," which features discussions with regional elected officials and experts on key issues affecting the metropolitan Washington area. The podcasts are audio recordings that feature regular addresses by the COG Board Chair as well as episodes on a variety of topics related to COG's primary areas of focus, including the environment, transportation, community planning, foster care and adoption, homeland security, and public health, among others. Thus far, The COG Podcast has featured Steven Pearlstein, Business columnist at The Washington Post, Michael Knapp, Montgomery County Council Member and former COG Board Chair, and Tim Lovain, TPB Member and Alexandria City Councilmember, among others.

There are two options for listening to the podcasts. One option is to visit the COG Web site and download individual episodes. A second option allows people to subscribe to the series, automatically receiving new episodes when they are uploaded. The COG Podcast was recently added to the Apple iTunes directory. The podcasts were promoted to the general public as well as the media (the audio from The COG Podcast is available free of charge for use by media outlets) and community and interest groups.

As the economic crisis worsens, donations to nonprofits are diminishing at precisely the time when their services are needed the most. This led the COG Board of Directors, at its October meeting, to call for continued charitable giving from Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac. The two corporations donated a combined $47 million to area nonprofits and community groups in 2007.

In December, COG participated in "Nonprofit 911," an event bringing together over 500 nonprofit, business, and government leaders to develop a plan of action that redefines how the nonprofit sector operates in a new fiscal reality.
