About COG

FOR MORE THAN 50 YEARS, the Metropolitan Washington Council of Governments, known as COG, has helped develop regional solutions to such issues as the environment, affordable housing, growth and development, public health, child welfare, public safety, homeland security, and transportation. COG is an independent, nonprofit association comprised of elected officials from 21 local governments, members of the Maryland and Virginia state legislatures, and members of the U.S. Congress.

Policies are set through the COG Board of Directors, the National Capital Region Transportation Planning Board, and the Metropolitan Washington Air Quality Committee. These three boards are responsible for a broad range of issues under the COG umbrella. Supporting committees help shape programs through the dedicated work of a wide array of public servants, from police chiefs to social workers.

COG Board of Directors

The Board of Directors is COG's governing body and is responsible for its overall policies, functions, and funds. Board members are appointed each year by the participating local governments and by caucuses of state legislative delegations from the region. The COG Board takes action on committee recommendations, discusses current and emerging regional problems, and receives briefings on issues facing the region. Board meetings are open to the public, and representatives from the media frequently attend. The COG Board meets monthly.

Please visit www.mwcog.org for the latest information on meeting dates and times.

COG Vision

Region Forward is our vision. It's a commitment by COG and its 21 member governments, who together seek to create a more accessible, sustainable, prosperous, and livable National Capital Region.

COG Mission

COG's mission is to make Region Forward happen by being a discussion forum, expert resource, issue advocate, and catalyst for action.

Message from the BOARD CHAIR and EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

On January 13, 2010, the COG Board of Directors adopted Region Forward, a new, comprehensive vision plan for the National Capital Region. Over the next several months, each of COG's 21 member governments individually endorsed the shared vision. It was a strong acknowledgement that to meet the challenges facing our growing, tri-state metropolitan region, we must work together more closely and effectively. Regionalism is not always easy. But as we have seen over the past year, collective and focused action by area leaders can produce significant results.

To improve bus transit across our region, our jurisdictions joined forces to submit an application to the U.S. Department of Transportation for a stimulus grant. In February 2010, we were awarded $58 million in federal funds. To help at-risk families prevent foreclosure, COG and the Nonprofit Roundtable of Greater Washington led a group of public and private sponsors to create the Capital Area Foreclosure Network. To promote job training and creation in the fast-growing healthcare field, COG brought together a diverse group of stakeholders at a workforce development forum.

MESSAGE, CONTINUED

To better guide millions of dollars in annual investments, the Emergency Preparedness Council—created by the COG Board—updated the region's Homeland Security Strategic Plan.

We must take on tough issues to meet the goals and targets we've set for ourselves in Region Forward. This is why we should be pleased that COG teamed up with the Greater Washington Board of Trade to create a task force to review how Metro is governed. The task force's work has been a catalyst for further action by area leaders, and—we hope—a key step toward improving Metro's performance and restoring the public's confidence in the system.

At COG, we believe that regional cooperation lays the foundation for an accessible, sustainable, prosperous and livable future. In the coming year, let's continue moving forward together as one region.

Region FORWARD

The COG Board of Directors began 2010 by adopting a new vision plan, Region Forward. COG staff then conducted extensive outreach at City and County Council meetings throughout the region on the plan and its accessibility, sustainability, prosperity and livability goals. By July, all 21 of COG's member governments had individually endorsed Region Forward, marking the first time local governments in the District of Columbia, Maryland and Virginia have agreed to a comprehensive set of shared goals and targets.

2010 ANNUAL REPORT

Transportation Planning Board (TPB)

The National Capital Region Transportation Planning Board (TPB) is the federally designated Metropolitan Planning Organization (MPO) for the region, and plays an important role as the regional forum for transportation planning. The TPB is responsible for developing regional transportation policy and a long-range transportation plan for the metropolitan Washington region, as well as programs that the federal government must approve in order for federal-aid transportation funds to flow to the area. The TPB was created in 1965 by an agreement among local governments and the state departments of transportation in response to the requirements of the Federal Aid Highway Act of 1962. In July 1966, by mutual agreement, the TPB became associated with COG. The TPB meets monthly and has a public comment period during each meeting.

ACCESSIBILITY

To ensure Region Forward's goals guide future decisions, the COG Board integrated them into the 2011 update of its Strategic Plan. Region Forward's goals are now COG's official vision and COG's mission is to make Region Forward happen by being a discussion forum, expert resource, issue advocate, and catalyst for action.

Region Forward is also at the heart of the 2011 COG Board Policy Focus and the 2012 Work Program and Budget, and it has already served as the foundation for a number of grant applications on topics ranging from sustainable communities to affordable housing to climate and energy issues.

COG has also embarked on an energetic outreach campaign for the initiative. It launched a web site and blog, RegionForward.org, as well as Facebook and Twitter pages, at the December 2010 Annual Meeting to build support for the plan and engage area residents and stakeholders in a conversation about transportation, environmental, growth and development issues. FORECLOSURE, CONTINUED

From Prince George's County in Maryland to Prince William County in Virginia, foreclosures have been negatively impacting area families and neighborhoods and overwhelming the housing counselors and others that work with them.

Chuck Bean, Executive Director of the Nonprofit Roundtable of Greater Washington, said "By working together we—nonprofits, governments, banks, and others—can solve problems that none of us can solve alone. CAFN is going to be a benefit to on-the-ground providers and to the people who need their help." CAFN's leadership includes representatives from local governments, grassroots organizations, funders, and large national institutions such as NeighborWorks America, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac.

During its first year, CAFN embarked on an active agenda. It supported organizations and local coalitions working with at-risk residents by hosting dozens of events for hundreds of homeowners, housing counselors, and realtors. It urged at-risk residents to get help through a public outreach campaign featuring over a thousand bus ads and tens of thousands of brochures. CAFN also researched and analyzed data to better target its resources to prevent foreclosures.

CAFN also established a Foreclosure Prevention Fund to support counseling agencies and, in January 2011, awarded $160,000 to seven local nonprofit organizations to expand or maintain their foreclosure prevention programs. The creation of the fund was motivated by a CAFN survey that found housing counselors were only able to work with 20,000 at-risk clients in 2009, while more than 148,000 mortgages in the region were delinquent or in foreclosure.

WMATA GOVERNANCE

In response to growing concerns that significant shortcomings in the Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority's governance structure have contributed to a serious decline in Metro's performance, COG and the Greater Washington Board of Trade created a Joint WMATA Governance Review Task Force.

The Task Force was comprised of 18 current and former elected officials, government managers, and business leaders. It met 16 times over five months and received input from dozens of officials, stakeholders, and experts, including current and former WMATA Board members and General Managers. The Task Force also received public comment, reviewed scholarly articles and studies, and examined governance arrangements for WMATA and other transit and multi-state public sector organizations.

GOVERNANCE, CONTINUED

On November 17, 2010, the Task Force released its report, Moving Metro Forward, during a press conference at COG. The Task Force found that the governance structure that may have been appropriate for WMATA to build a new transit system in the 1960s is not appropriate to operate today's mature system. It found that the current structure does not promote accountability or regional cohesion and, in a number of areas, WMATA is out of step with best practices employed by other transit agencies. The Task Force recommended specific changes to improve delineation of responsibilities at WMATA, the composition of the WMATA Board, the role of the Board Chair, and decision-making by the WMATA Board. It proposed that these changes be carried out by WMATA's Signatories, Appointing Authorities, and Board.

Less than a week after the Task Force released its report, Virginia Governor Bob McDonnell, Maryland Governor Martin O'Malley, and D.C. Mayor-elect Vincent Gray issued a joint statement that they were "committed to working together to advance the implementation of the Task Force's recommendations." In January 2011, after a 45-day review of the Task Force report as well as the WMATA Riders Advisory Council's governance report, the three state Departments of Transportation released a plan and schedule for reforming WMATA. In 2011, COG will continue to engage area leaders and stakeholders on the Task Force's findings and recommendations, track the progress of the reform effort, and provide assistance as needed to the states, appointing authorities, WMATA Board, and others involved in WMATA governance reform.

TPB SCENARIO STUDIES

The National Capital Region Transportation Planning Board (TPB) unveiled new scenario studies in 2010 showing the possibility for dramatic changes in how the region gets around. The first of the two scenario studies, aptly-titled “What Would It Take?” examined what it would take to achieve aggressive regional climate change goals in the transportation sector. It identified actions needed to meet the region’s greenhouse gas emissions reduction goals as adopted in the National Capital Region Climate Change Report and Region Forward.

“What Would It Take?” highlighted several strategies to meet these goals, noting however, that while the successful execution of all the strategies proposed in the study would result in significantly reduced emissions, the reduction would still fall 8.75 percent short of the 2030 goals. The study thus suggests that the region could “express support for high-payoff measures that require federal action,” such as increased fuel efficiency standards for heavy duty vehicles and increasing efficiency standards for passenger vehicles to 55 mpg by 2030.

In the second scenario study, the “CLRP Aspirations,” the TPB examined two scenarios and measured their impact on driving, congestion, transportation mode share, and air pollution. The “full scenario” looked at the effects of implementing a 1,650-mile regional system of priced lanes or tolls (including new lanes and conversions of existing lanes), a region-wide 500-mile Bus Rapid Transit (BRT) system, and changes in land use policies to promote denser, transit-oriented development. The second scenario looked at the effects of making just the land use changes without introducing the priced lanes or BRT.

Under the full scenario, the amount of driving increases while congestion decreases significantly. Bicycling, walking, and transit use all increase significantly, and carpooling experiences a small uptick. Bicycling, walking, and transit trips increase significantly in the second scenario as well, while the amount of driving decreases and congestion increases slightly. Multiple targets in Region Forward are centered on the intersection of land use and transportation, with the aim of increasing the share of trips by transit, walking, and biking, while reducing vehicle miles traveled and greenhouse gas emissions.

“These scenarios help us ask some fundamental questions about how to dramatically improve the performance of the region’s transportation system,” said Falls Church Vice Mayor and 2010 TPB Chair David Snyder. “We can use the results of these studies to understand the potential role of each of the components — land use, tolls, and more transit.”

In January 2010, the COG Board of Directors agreed to make economic and workforce development a top priority for the year. District of Columbia Chairman and 2010 COG Chair Kwame Brown led the Board's focus in this area, noting that although these are not traditional issue areas for COG, economic recovery and job growth are a primary focus for all leaders given the difficult economic situation. Region Forward contains multiple targets related to economic and workforce development, many of which focus on improving education outcomes, diversifying employment, and increasing access to vocational training and graduate education.

Actions taken to counter the current economic malaise will also make the region more competitive — nationally and globally — in the long term. Understanding this, in January 2010, the Board adopted Closing the Gaps to Build the Future, a COG report on improving workforce development in metropolitan Washington. One of the immediate recommendations was to convene a large forum of stakeholders from business, education, workforce development, and economic development to discuss the Closing the Gaps report in the context of a particular field. COG chose health care, which is projected to be a major growth sector over the next decade, and held “United for Jobs: A Forum on Careers in Health” on June 3, 2010.

Workforce and health experts attended the forum, pointing out that metropolitan Washington lags slightly behind the national average in developing new jobs in the fast-growing health care sector, even though the region has produced jobs in other sectors at twice the national rate. Regional leaders were called upon to increase funding for community colleges to prepare candidates for jobs in new areas of the health care sector, such as health information management, and to help colleges and universities create more clinical training facilities. Participants also encouraged philanthropic organizations to support more scholarships for prospective students in health care related fields.

“We have an opportunity here in metropolitan Washington to develop the most competitive healthcare workforce in the country. We are home to one of the nation’s strongest economies and we have fantastic academic and research institutions. But for all of our strengths, we don’t have a regional workforce strategy,” said Brown. “We are better positioned to prosper — especially in this time of limited resources — if we band together as a region.”

SUSTAINABILITY, CONTINUED

In January 2010, COG's Climate, Energy, and Environment Policy Committee (CEEPC) adopted the 2012 Climate Action Workplan, which incorporated the goals and targets of the National Capital Region Climate Change Report and Region Forward. CEEPC's top priorities in 2010 were to develop a system for tracking progress toward greenhouse gas reduction goals, to have 50 percent or more of COG's jurisdictions preparing greenhouse gas inventories, and to develop partnerships to fund and implement a regional climate and energy public education campaign. CEEPC is anticipating the completion of a progress report on its 2012 Action Plan in 2011.

In October 2010, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) announced that metropolitan Washington was one of eight regions nationwide chosen to receive technical assistance from the agency to promote sustainable growth and development issues. The EPA will assist COG and its members in integrating climate change adaptation into local and regional planning. The winning project, submitted by COG, was based on Region Forward and the National Capital Region Climate Change Report.

"Now that all 21 of COG's member governments have endorsed Region Forward, it's time to implement the plan. The challenges posed by climate change demand that we develop adaptation strategies that will ensure the sustainability of our region," said Arlington County Board Member Jay Fisette, who also serves as CEEPC Chairman.

Also, in collaboration with the International Council for Local Environmental Initiatives (ICLEI), COG hosted two training sessions on preparing greenhouse gas inventories for government operations and the wider community. Participants received information on the available sources of data on greenhouse gases, as well as the methods and tools needed to prepare an inventory.

The WE CAN campaign was launched as a pilot program in 2010. WE CAN, which stands for Wise Energy by Capital Area Neighbors, is a community challenge program that encourages area residents to reduce energy use by offering rewards and fostering friendly competition. Over 300 households in the three pilot communities have joined the online campaign to reduce their energy use.

Homeland Security STRATEGIC PLAN

Nine years after the 9/11 terrorist attacks, the National Capital Region Emergency Preparedness Council adopted an update to the Homeland Security Strategic Plan for the National Capital Region. The plan was a major collaborative effort, produced by government, nonprofit, and private sector officials, and will guide regional disaster preparations for the next five years, including how millions in federal grant funds will be spent.

The strategic plan focuses on advancing the region's capabilities in several areas: improving its interoperable communications systems; enhancing its ability to share information during emergencies; protecting critical infrastructure like power and water supplies; and improving its ability to prevent deaths and injuries from terrorism and natural events.

While it offers a roadmap for regional disaster planning and builds upon much of the work of local and state governments, the strategic plan is not an emergency operations plan. Local and state governments are responsible for responding to emergencies within their jurisdictions.

"Disaster preparedness must be a partnership," said Prince William County Supervisor Frank Principi, who served as 2010 Chair of the Emergency Preparedness Council. "This plan was built upon collaboration and cooperation among the area's governments, nonprofit organizations and business groups. Because a hurricane or terrorist attack can affect the entire metropolitan area, it's critical that we prepare and respond to disasters as a region."

Snow COORDINATION

On April 5, 2010, COG held a Snow Forum for decision-makers from the federal government, D.C., Maryland and Virginia to review lessons learned from the winter's record setting snowfalls and improve coordination for future storms. The forum resulted in changes in federal government closure and telework policies that helped, but were not enough, to prevent unprecedented traffic jams on the evening rush hour on January 26, 2011 during a snow and ice storm. Snow and emergency coordination will be a priority in 2011 and COG will work with business, transportation, and utility providers to improve electric power restoration and traffic and transit management to ensure public safety and mobility.

Anacostia RESTORATION

On April 19, 2010, then-Majority Leader Steny Hoyer (MD) appeared with other leaders from the region, including Maryland Governor Martin O'Malley, U.S. Representatives Chris Van Hollen (MD), Donna Edwards (MD), Eleanor Holmes Norton (DC), and Montgomery County Executive Ike Leggett to announce the creation of the Anacostia Watershed Restoration Plan, a comprehensive set of goals and strategies to clean up the pollution and run-off that has made the region's Anacostia River one of the most polluted in the nation. Region Forward includes very ambitious goals for restoration of watersheds in the region. The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, the State of Maryland, the District of Columbia, Montgomery County, Prince George's County, and COG supported the Plan's development

Kids Need Families LIKE YOURS

On April 29, 2010, COG and the Freddie Mac Foundation teamed up to launch “Kids Need Families Like Yours,” a media campaign to attract new foster families using the region’s Foster Parents of the Year as spokespersons. Kids Need Families Like Yours has evolved into a social media community for prospective and current foster families (found at www.facebook.com/kidsneedfamilies). The program is designed to find foster families for many of the area’s teens and children in need of care. Social workers report that because of the economic downturn, some families are too overwhelmed by stress, illness and a lack of income to adequately care for their children. The campaign was very successful, generating coverage in The Washington Post as well as several Spanish-language and community newspapers, resulting in a significant increase in inquiries during its two-week run.

Bike to Work Day 2010

On May 21, 2010, a record 9,200 commuters participated in Bike to Work Day and helped spread the message of finding alternatives to driving alone to work. Elected officials including U.S. Congressman Earl Blumenauer and officials from the Department of Energy, Department of Transportation and many others supported the event, which is organized by COG's Commuter Connections and the Washington Area Bicyclist Association. This year, a convoy of COG employees, including executive director David Robertson, biked from Freedom Plaza to COG's offices in northeast Washington.

Lawn Mower EXCHANGE

On August 14, 2010, hundreds of Marylanders traded in their old, gas-powered lawn mowers for new, electric-powered ones at the Great Maryland Lawn Mower Exchange in Baltimore. The Maryland Department of the Environment and Clean Air Partners, a program chartered by COG and the Baltimore Metropolitan Council, organized the event to educate the public on pollution caused by gas-powered mowers and to provide an opportunity for area residents to switch to battery power at a discounted price. According to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, gas mowers account for 5 percent of air pollution in the United States. One traditional gas-powered mower produces as much air pollution as 43 new cars.

Helicopter NOISE

On September 22, 2010, residents from around the region gathered in Arlington County for a forum that focused on what many regard as the excessive and disruptive noise from helicopters in the area. The Helicopter Community Forum was organized by Arlington County Board Member Mary Hynes, who serves as the liaison to the COG Board on aviation issues, and Fairfax County Supervisor Gerry Hyland and included presentations from military officials as well as a panel discussion that included several community and civic organizations directly impacted by helicopter flyovers. In November 2010, a follow up briefing was held for area elected officials. A second public forum is scheduled for February 2011 and plans are being developed for a new system to log community input on helicopter noise.

Clean Air Act 40TH ANNIVERSARY

On September 22, 2010, the Metropolitan Washington Air Quality Committee celebrated the 40th anniversary of the Clean Air Act and the continued improvement of air quality in the region. After the Clean Air Act was amended in 1990 and air quality and health requirements were strengthened, MWAQC was formed to prepare a regional air quality plan. The region now meets five of six national health standards for air pollutants and is making progress in reducing ozone pollution. The number of unhealthy “Code Red” air quality days has dropped from more than 31 in 1988, right before adoption of the 1990 Clean Air Act, to only a few a year (zero in 2009, three in 2010) even with a more stringent standard.

TIGER TRANSIT FUNDING

On December 14, 2010, U.S. Transportation Secretary Ray LaHood came to COG to sign $58.8 million in TIGER grants for the National Capital Region. The TIGER (Transportation Investments Generating Economic Recovery) funding, part of the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act, will improve bus transportation along priority corridors in the District of Columbia, Maryland, and Virginia, and create better connections between buses and other forms of transportation in the region.

“This $58.8 million investment is an excellent example of the Obama Administration’s commitment to modernizing transit systems and creating economic opportunity,” said Secretary LaHood. “Thanks to TIGER Recovery Act grants like this one, people are benefiting from better transportation opportunities and an improved quality of life in communities across the country.”

Transportation Planning Board members and staff, and the staffs of member governments, state departments of transportation, and area transit agencies worked collaboratively to generate the grant application in a very short amount of time.
