Employer Challenge

Each year a challenge is held for employers to help encourage participation in Bike to Work Day. The top five organizations with the greatest number of bicyclists are placed into a raffle for a random chance to win a luncheon compliments of Commuter Connections. To commemorate Bike to Work Day, accomplishments of small and mid-sized companies, Commuter Connections awards plaques for the highest participation at various employee size levels.

NIH WINS BIKE TO WORK DAY EMPLOYER CHALLENGE!

The National Institutes of Health (NIH) had the most registered participants for Bike to Work Day (BTWD) and, once again, won Commuter Connections' BTWD Employer Challenge. Each year Commuter Connections conducts the "Bike to Work Day Employer Challenge" in the Washington D.C. region to encourage and recognize employers who have a large number of employees register for the BTWD event.

The top five employers are entered into a drawing for a chance at winning a free lunch for Bike to Work Day participants, provided by Commuter Connections, in recognition of their accomplishment. Of the 12,700 Total BTWD participants this year, 591 of them were from NIH. This means that almost 5% of all registered riders in the entire D.C. region came from one organization. That's impressive!

good way to enjoy the outdoors and to get some exercise." Cycling is a strong part of the commuting culture at NIH, in 1980 and has a membership of more than 400 bicyclists. The Club has been active in helping to choose the design and installation locations of new bike racks and lockers throughout the NIH campus.
