About the Metropolitan Washington Council of Governments (COG)

The Metropolitan Washington Council of Governments (COG) is an independent, nonprofit association that brings area leaders together to address major regional issues in the District of Columbia, suburban Maryland and Northern Virginia. COG's membership comprises 300 elected officials from 22 local governments, the Maryland and Virginia state legislatures, and U.S. Congress.

About This Directory

Listing in this directory should not be construed as a recommendation or endorsement by the Metropolitan Washington Council of Governments, which is providing the information as a public service to encourage reuse and recycling of materials.

The industry is constantly changing. Some businesses may have reduced or expanded the types of materials they accept. Always call ahead to check material specifications and to find out the terms and conditions required.

This directory is available as an online searchable database and downloadable PDF at

Introduction

Each day, thousands of tons of construction and demolition (C&D) materials throughout the Washington metropolitan area are disposed of at landfills. Yet, there are more than 45 different materials that are easily recovered for reuse or recycling— from antiques and architectural salvage to metal, concrete, asphalt, bricks, and gravel.

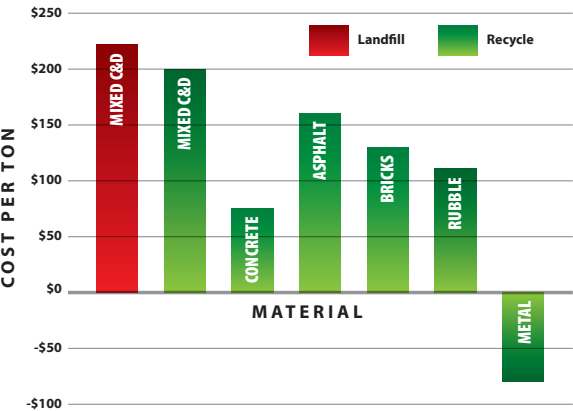

The Metropolitan Washington Council of Governments provides this guide book to help builders save money and reduce environmental impacts by diverting C&D materials away from landfills and using the recovery services provided by the companies listed in this guide. You may download a PDF version of the guide or search the online database to find companies near your project site.

This site also includes valuable information about the value of recycling, definitions of terms used for recycling C&D, tips for job sites, frequently asked questions, recycling and green buildings, and links to other C&D recycling websites.

Why Recycle?

Save Money: Reuse and recycling save money by offering lower cost options to landfilling of C&D materials. The following table provides a cost comparison of tipping fees at a local C&D landfill and several C&D recyclers in the area.

Landfilling vs. Recycling of C&D Materials in the Metropolitan Washington Region

Note: Hauling fees are not included but are comparable for landfilling and recycling. Metal cost is below zero due to revenue. This graph was generated by collecting data from local Recycling Companies in May 2015

Meet Green Construction Codes and Take Advantage of Incentive Policies: Many jurisdictions in the area have green construction requirements or incentives. The Green Construction Code in Washington, D.C., requires that at least 50% of construction waste be recycled or salvaged. The Arlington County, VA Green Building Incentive Policy offers points for meeting LEED certification requirements including reuse of building materials. Montgomery County, MD, provides tax credits to buildings larger than 10,000 square feet for meeting LEED certification requirements such as reuse of materials. Fairfax County encourages green building in its comprehensive plan.

Protect the Environment and Conserve Resources: C&D materials are equivalent to 40% of all raw material used annually in the U.S. Recovering these materials reduces mining and forest extraction, minimizes industrial air emissions and lowers consumption of fossil fuels.

Extend the Life of Local Landfills: As new landfills are becoming increasingly more difficult to locate, diverting C&D materials from local landfills preserves valuable space for materials that can't be recycled or reused.

Support Local Businesses: This directory represents more than 200 businesses in the Washington metropolitan area that reuse or recycle C&D materials.

C&D Materials Recovery Definitions

C&D Materials – Waste materials produced in the process of construction, renovation, or demolition of structures and roads. Many waste materials generated from natural disasters are also considered C&D material. Examples include: concrete, asphalt, wood, brick, metals, wallboard and roofing shingles (EPA, 2012).

Deconstruction – Deconstruction is the selective dismantlement of building components for material salvage.

Salvage – The recovery of reusable items such as mantels, doors, fixtures, tiles, and hardware. Old-growth lumber, vintage bricks, and antique fixtures can be quite valuable. Salvaged materials and products can also be installed in new or renovated buildings.

Recycling – The collection, processing and marketing of waste material that would have otherwise been disposed of in a landfill.

Waste Minimization – Limiting the generation of waste materials through wise use of raw materials.

10 Tips for Success on the Job Site

1. Know the value of materials. Inventory materials, assess what to salvage and recycle, and determine market value for each material type by calling companies in our directory.
2. Get everyone onboard. Communicate job site material handling procedures to employees and contractors to ensure participation. Appoint a recycling supervisor to involve and train workers. Establish a recognition program to encourage employee participation. Discuss recycling at project meetings. Educate workers on the project to keep lunch bags, caulking tubes and other trash out of recycling bins.
3. Develop a waste recovery plan. A waste recovery plan identifies the material types that will be generated, sets protocol for onsite collection, designates who will haul away each material and where it will be delivered.
4. Require subcontractors to participate in the recycling program. Include reuse or recycling guidelines for subcontractors as part of their contract terms.
5. Allow time for deconstruction and salvage. Remove salvageable items before starting demolition of a building. Wood joists, wood flooring, bricks, cabinets, and architectural details such as mantels and molding are among the most valuable building materials. The D.C. region has a number of companies that offer deconstruction and salvage services.
6. Consider “time-based” hauling. Using your project schedule, determine what materials are likely to be generated at various stages of the project. Schedule dumpster pulls on a regular basis to avoid contamination of recycled materials.
7. Use a recycling service. Hire a hauler or recycler to handle the job. Consider including in the agreement: materials to be recycled, documentation of weight or volume, schedule for container pickup, and container labeling.
8. Make recycling easy. Clearly mark bins/roll-offs and locate them in a convenient area for workers to access. Provide signage in the language of your workers. Symbols can help non-English speaking workers. Provide a trash container next to recycling bins to limit contamination.
9. Monitor. Check recycling containers for contamination and fullness. Check-in regularly with subcontractors to ensure they are properly recycling.

10. Document, document, document. Work with haulers, subcontractors and markets to track costs, quantities, and types of materials recovered. Use hauling slips to verify recycling quantities.

Frequently Asked Questions

How can I recycle when space at my job site is at a premium? Coordinate recycling services with the construction schedule and limit the size of containers to match construction phases and space constraints. This approach works particularly well when construction phases generate homogeneous materials such as drywall or cardboard as it avoids the need for multiple bins. Mixed material processing off-site is another possibility.

How do I find a hauler willing to recycle? Check with companies in this directory. Many provide hauling services or can recommend haulers. Be sure to have them document the processing facility and weight of each load.

Won't deconstruction and salvage delay my schedule? Deconstruction can be scheduled during the move-out phase. This leaves less work and volume for the demolition phase. Deconstruction can uncover areas that need asbestos and lead removal before demolition proceeds.

How do I prevent container contamination? Train workers on the use of recycling bins. Proper signage on recycling bins is essential. Consider locating recycling bins in a locked or supervised area or having bins with lids to discourage contamination by the public during non-working hours.

Can mixed loads of C&D material be recycled? Yes, taking unsorted C&D material to a mixed waste recycling facility takes less time than sorting materials onsite and may allow recycling for projects with fast track schedules that would otherwise have to landfill C&D materials. Our region has many facilities that accept unsorted loads of C&D material.

Is source separation better than the mixed material method? In many cases source separation is less expensive since the cost of separating materials onsite is more than offset by lower tipping fees. If space onsite is limited, consider dedicating one container for easily separated material such as cardboard and another container for mixed materials.

What are the main obstacles to recycling? Unfamiliar crews, accelerated schedule, overcrowding of workers, multiple materials, limited site space. Careful planning, training, and specific contract provisions can address these issues.

Recycling & Green Buildings

An increasing number of building owners in our region are seeking green building certification through the US Green Building Council's Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design (LEED) program. Buildings can be certified as LEED Silver, Gold, or Platinum based on the number of points earned. Points are available in twelve different areas including Materials & Resources which includes construction waste management.

Projects that recycle 50% of their waste earn 1 point. A 75% recycling rate or not generating more than 2.5 pounds of construction waste per square foot of the buildings area earns two points. To earn construction waste management points, projects must develop a construction waste management plan, identify recycling goals, and quantify waste generated and recycled by volume or weight.

What's Important for LEED Projects?

- Early planning
- Waste management plan
- Excellent documentation (weights, markets, process)
- Focus on heavy, high-volume and high-value items
- If space allows, be thorough – don't miss a waste type
- Report everything

For more information on LEED, visit the U.S. Green Building Council.

Business Directory by Material

Important Reminders

- Always call ahead to confirm hours of operation and assure acceptance of materials you wish to recycle.
- Do not bring hazardous or toxic materials, unless you know for certain that the facility accepts them.
- Most recycling facilities reserve the right to reject any load that is too contaminated or otherwise unacceptable. Some will charge penalty fees for too much contamination.
- The purer and cleaner your load, the more valuable it is.
- Arrive in time to unload, pay, and leave before the facility closes.
- Some companies require that you set up an account or sign a contract with them before you can bring your materials.
- Many recycling facilities have safety rules, and some require you to wear a hard hat and steel toed safety shoes on premises.

Business Listings Terminology

Buyback business will pay for materials.

Donation business will accept materials free of charge. You donate your materials to the facility.

Fee business will charge for collection service or for accepting dropped-off materials.

Drop-off business will accept materials delivered to their facilities (restrictions may apply).

Pickup business may provide collection service.

Metals

Included scrap appliances.

Refrigerators, freezers, and air conditioners must be discharged of all Freon and other hazardous refrigerants. This should be done by a certified professional and properly documented. The appliance should be properly labeled to indicate that it has been discharged.

Drums and buckets should be empty and clean. Some dealers require that the tops of drums be removed.
