DATE: Fall 2005

AUTHOR: Ambrosia Rosetta
Department of Human Services, Planning, and Public Safety
Metropolitan Washington Council of Governments

GUIDANCE: Co-Occurring Disorders Committee

AGENCY: COG is a regional organization comprised of elected officials from 19 local governments surrounding our nation's capital, plus area members of the Maryland and Virginia legislatures, the U.S. Senate, and the U.S. House of Representatives. COG provides a focus for action and develops sound regional responses to such issues as the environment, affordable housing, economic development, health and family concerns, human services, population growth, public safety, and transportation.

ABSTRACT: This directory contains a listing of agencies in the Washington metropolitan area that provide services specifically for individuals with co-occurring substance abuse and mental health disorders (the dually diagnosed). Information such as location, contact number, types of programs, and services is furnished for each agency.

Background

This resource directory is part of an ongoing effort on the part of the Metropolitan Washington Council of Governments (COG) to provide practical information to substance abuse and mental health professionals in the Washington metropolitan region. The directory features a listing of agencies offering treatment services for individuals with co-occurring substance abuse and mental health disorders, outlining important characteristics of the program such as population served, types of services rendered, fees, and eligibility requirements.

The first edition of this report was published in 1991 through the leadership of the Dual Diagnosis Subcommittee of the Treatment, Intervention, and Rehabilitation Committee of COG. The subcommittee was formed in 1990 by public and private sector professionals representing the substance abuse and mental health fields. Through publications, trainings, and roundtable discussions, the Co-Occurring Disorders Committee strives to 1) promote effective, evidence-based and integrated treatment services for individuals with co-occurring mental health and substance use disorders; 2) promote interagency and collegial communication and collaboration among public and private treatment programs and their staff providing these services; and 3) provide low cost trainings on dual diagnosis topics for professionals providing treatment for individuals with mental health and substance use disorders.

Methodology

The research methodology consisted of three components: 1) an initial telephone contact of the 53 agencies listed in the previous edition of this directory; 2) additional telephone contacts of other possible providers of dual diagnosis services; 3) telephone interviews of all the agencies that provide services for individuals with co-occurring substance abuse and mental health disorders.

The criterion for inclusion in the directory was a licensed agency in the Washington metropolitan area that provides services for individuals with co-occurring substance abuse and mental health disorders (the dually diagnosed). Of the 53 agencies in the previous directory 20 of them responded, qualified and were included in the directory while the remaining 33 either did not respond, no longer provide dual diagnosis treatment or no longer exist. Of the 200 total agencies contacted those that responded and qualified were included in this publication. Therefore, this is not an exhaustive list.

Defining Co-occurring Disorders

People suffering from co-occurring substance abuse disorders and mental disorders are individuals who have at least one mental disorder as well as an alcohol or drug use disorder. While these disorders may interact differently in any one person (e.g., an episode of depression may trigger a relapse into alcohol abuse, or cocaine use may exacerbate schizophrenic symptoms), at least one disorder of each type can be diagnosed independently of the other.

Co-occurring disorders may vary among individuals and in the same individual over time. Both disorders can vary along the dimensions of severity, chronicity, and degree of impairment in functioning. Both disorders may be severe or mild, or one may be more severe than the other. Either or both disorders may reflect episodes of acute symptom exacerbations or a chronic condition and may change over time. (CSAT, 1994)

There are no specific combinations of substance abuse disorders and mental disorders that are defined uniquely as co-occurring disorders. In addition, substance abuse and mental health problems (such as binge drinking by people with mental disorders) that do not reach the diagnostic threshold also are part of the co-occurring disorders landscape - problems that may offer opportunities for early intervention.

The Department of Mental Health (DMH) provides comprehensive mental health services to adults, children, youths, and their families. DMH also evaluates and treats individuals referred through the criminal justice system.

DMH serves more than 7,500 people annually through the DMH Community Services Agency and other community-based mental health service providers under contract to the agency. Inpatient services, whether acute, long-term, or forensic, are provided at St. Elizabeth's Hospital. The DMH Community Services Agency provides routine, urgent, and emergency mental health rehabilitation services at mental health centers in Northeast, Northwest, and Southeast Washington.

The goal of the Department of Mental Health is to develop, support, and oversee a comprehensive, community-based, consumer-driven, culturally competent, quality mental health system. This system should be responsive and accessible to children, youths, adults, and their families. It should leverage continuous positive change through its ability to learn and to partner. It should also ensure that mental health providers are accountable to consumers and offer services that promote recovery from mental illness.

The Department of Mental Health Community Services Agency (CSA) provides mental health services to approximately 4,000 adults, children, and youth in the District of Columbia. The CSA is certified as a Core Service Agency, or "clinical home," which means it is accountable to each person it serves. A CSA must ensure the necessary services and supports are provided to promote adults' recovery from mental illness and build resiliency in children and youth to help them reach their full potential.

Services integrate the strengths of family relationships, respond to individual cultural differences, and incorporate the special needs of each family into treatment plans. The CSA provides prevention and education services, and uses many treatment interventions including counseling, medication, and other rehabilitation services. The CSA also has mental health programs specifically designed for older adults. Our services are provided at homes, schools, neighborhood sites, or our many locations throughout the District. Our school-based services are provided to all grade levels in the public and charter schools. Children and adolescents involved in court and foster care systems also benefit from the various services provided to them and their families.

The mission of Act II Counseling Services, Inc. is to provide an adequate and objective evaluation of our client's substance abuse use, to offer education to persons not evidencing problem use or addiction and to provide cost affective treatment to those clients experiencing problem use or addiction. The whole person "physical, emotional and spiritual" will be addressed. Act II was founded and operated in the belief that treatment for chemical dependency is best offered in an atmosphere of care and understanding coupled with recognition of the serious consequence of abuse. We believe that chemical dependency is a tractable illness characterized by compulsion and loss of control with a tendency to relapse unless support systems are fully utilized. We understand that each individual is ultimately responsible for his/her own actions and that recovery is determined by the clients efforts, honesty and willingness. Act II is board certified and offers substance abuse counseling and treatment, evaluations and assessments, maintenance program, MVA alcohol and drug education and treatment.

Reality Inc's treatment programs provide education, skills and resources to enable clients to live clean and sober lives. A holistic approach that is based on the individual needs of each client guides the treatment process. The majority of clients at Reality are diagnosed with co-occurring disorders. Reality has been treating the dually diagnosed since 1987, being the first in the state of Maryland to do so. Both the addiction and the mental health issues are addressed utilizing education, counseling, referrals and medication when ordered by our psychiatrist. The primary diagnosis must be addiction to be admitted to Reality.

The goal is to provide enough resources, skills, and education along with a discharge plan that will enable these clients to live productive and sober lives, with jobs and homes of their own. The residential programs are conducted in a home-like setting as they are housed in historic buildings. This gives the client a different type of rehab experience in that he/she becomes part of the Reality family as everyone works together to achieve their goals.

Clients at the Second Genesis co-occurring disorders program live in a safe environment while receiving integrated treatment. The multidisciplinary team includes substance abuse and mental health professionals, a nurse and a vocational counselor. A psychiatrist provides on going supervision and medication monitoring. Clients participate in group and individual therapy sessions. While given jobs with in the residence clients are being prepared to live independently. Those who are able, complete a phase of treatment which includes working in the community while residing at the treatment facility.

This unique program is a collaboration between Second Genesis and the State of Maryland to provide integrated substance abuse and mental health treatment to an underserved population.

Second Genesis uses a modified therapeutic community treatment model that blends interventions for substance abuse, vocational service, educational service, family related services, relapse prevention and social skill building. The therapeutic environment created in Second Genesis programs uses positive support to encourage positive choices for lifestyle and behavior changes. Our programs empower individuals to make choices that will encourage their continued recovery and provide educational and vocational services that promote personal growth.

Following admission, the clients work with their primary counselor to develop an initial treatment plan. The treatment plan contains individual goals related to substance abuse treatment, educational objectives, vocational objectives, housing, continuing care treatment, and outside interventions for medical and behavioral needs.

Mothers coping with addiction have unique needs. They are often faced with a choice between getting help and keeping their children. Mellwood House allows mothers and children to stay together, so women not only get help with their addiction, but also learn crucial parenting skills. The program provides substance abuse treatment to women and assist their children educationally, socially, developmentally and psychologically.

During their stay, the women at Mellwood House not only receive treatment for their substance abuse, but also receive assistance with vocational skills, social skills, and parenting skills. In addition Mellwood House provides pre-employment skill training and assist the women with locating a safe place to live when they have completed the program. The women participate in groups, individual sessions, classes, house assignments, and parenting. The program provides continuing care services for the women and their children who are living in the community and returning weekly for support.

The children get the support they need, too. Many children have emotional scars from growing up in the midst of drugs and many were born with drugs in their system. With full-time children's therapists and child care professionals, Second Genesis has the means to help these children catch up in school and in their social and physical development. Second Genesis initiates high-risk prevention education and intervention with these children in an effort to break the intergenerational cycle of substance abuse.

The National Counseling Group (NCG) is a private organization providing in-home and outpatient services to youth and families. Virginia locations include Annandale, Herndon, Manassas, Richmond, Norfolk and Roanoke in the fall of 2005.

NCG specializes in providing substance abuse, mental health and life skills for youth, adults and families in the office, home or community. NCG's highly skilled, professional staff works with the clients to provide comprehensive evaluations and develop treatment plans to address any number of mental health, behavioral or substance abuse concerns. Clients with co-occurring concerns frequently require the individualized treatment planning that NCG offers.

NCG's strength-based model necessarily strives to involve the natural support of relatives, friends, teachers, probation officers, religious leaders, attorneys and others. Services offered include individual, family and group counseling. Dual diagnosis groups are available for adolescents, young adults (18-24), and adults. In addition, anger management groups are available as well as drug and alcohol screening.
