Adverse Weather Situational Analysis Report

January 14, 2019
Product No. 2019-01-029

Incident Name: Winter Weather Event (1/12/19 – 1/14/19)
Situational Analysis Report #: 011
Report Date: 1/14/19
Issue Time: 4PM

Current Situation Overview:
There are no warnings, watches or advisories for the NCR. Temperatures will be well below freezing so any wet or slushy surfaces will re-freeze again tonight, creating slippery conditions for the morning commute.

Roadways:
District of Columbia:

- DC's Snow Command (consisting of the District Departments of Transportation and Public Works) remains activated since 12PM on Saturday, 1/12. Snow command will be active until at least 12PM 1/14.
- The District Snow Team's Automated Vehicle Locator (AVL) system shows snow plow activity within the last 12 hours (these streets will appear blue) and where they were more than 12 hours ago (these streets will appear gray). For additional information, visit the AVL site at: <https://snow.dc.gov/page/about-track-our-plows>

Maryland:

- Department of Transportation State Highway Administration (MDOT SHA) Emergency Operation Center (EOC) returned to normal operations at 10AM.
- MDOT SHA's Statewide Transportation Operations Resources Map (STORM) tracks winter operations in real-time with a 30-minute history. For additional information on roadway conditions, see: <https://www.roads.maryland.gov/Pages/release.aspx?newsId=3312>

Virginia:

- VDOT crews are deployed to address hazardous road conditions in affected areas. Crews are focusing on interstates and primary routes for maximum safety and connectivity. Once major routes are passable, crews will shift focus to secondary routes and neighborhood streets. VDOT's goal is to make all roads passable, meaning that the road can be travelled safely with cautious driving, within 48 hours of a storm's end. <http://www.virginiadot.org/newsroom/statewide/2019/vdot-adjust-travel-for-the-conditions-during-wintery-weather-1-13-2019.asp>
- Virginia Department of Transportation is at a Level 3 (out of 5) deployment of resources as of Monday at 4PM.

Airports:

- Ronald Reagan Washington National Airport: 148 Delays / 65 Cancellations
- Baltimore/Washington International Thurgood Marshall Airport: 14 Delays / 4 Cancellations
- Dulles International Airport: 55 Delays / 22 Cancellations

Bus:

- Metro bus service on a Severe Snow Plan due to road conditions and will be limited to major roads only.

Rail:
Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority (WMATA):

- Metro rail normal service at all above and below ground stations.
- WMATA EOC remains activated to a "partial" status as of Saturday, 1/12 at 8PM.
